The Anti Corruption Authorities (ACAs) Initiative is a virtual platform that offers the opportunity to ACAs staff and practitioners to connect, collaborate and articulate new ideas to collectively address common challenges. The information and tools provided helps ACAs understand (a) how they can become more effective to address corruption and (b) what factors can help reinforce their ability to resist efforts to undercut effectiveness. In particular, this initiative aims at:

- Gathering more systematic knowledge on the structure and experience of ACAs,
- Increasing awareness of the challenges faced by these bodies,
- Identifying mechanisms that can help to overcome these challenges,
- Supporting the development of a system that can help ACAs monitor performance

The information is provided directly by ACAs' staff through the use of surveys and interviews. At this stage more than 60 agencies have responded and shared their experiences and lessons learnt while implementing an AC Strategy in their country.
